

CORDIAL INVITATION ADDRESSED TO WORKING GIRLS

Miss Barrows Tells How Mrs. Pinkham's Advice Helps Working Girls

Girls who work are particularly susceptible to female disorders, especially those who are obliged to stand on their feet from morning until night in stores or factories.

Day in and day out the girl toils, and she is often the bread-winner of the family. Whether she is sick or well, whether it rains or shines, she must get to her place of employment, perform the duties exacted of her—smile and be agreeable.

Among this class the symptoms of female diseases are early manifest by weak and aching backs, pain in the lower limbs and lower part of the stomach. In consequence of frequent wetting of the feet, monthly periods become painful and irregular, and frequently there are faint and dizzy spells, with loss of appetite, until life is a burden. All of these symptoms point to a derangement of the female organism which can be easily and promptly cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Miss Abby F. Barrows, Nelsonville, Athens Co., Ohio, tells what this great medicine did for her. She writes: "I feel it my duty to tell you the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier have done for me. Before I took them I was very nervous, had dull headaches, pains in back, and months were irregular. I had been to several doctors, and they did me no good."

"Your medicine has made me well and strong. I can do most any kind of work without complaint, and my periods are all right."

"I am in better health than I ever was, and I know it is all due to your remedies. I recommend your advice and medicine to all who suffer."

It is to such girls that Mrs. Pinkham holds out a helping hand and extends a cordial invitation to correspond with her. Her long record of success in treating women's ills makes her letters of advice of untold value to every ailing working girl, and from her wide experience and skill she quickly points the way to health. Her advice is free, and all letters are held by her in the strictest confidence. Address, Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

STATE LIBRARIANS TO MEET.

Interesting Meeting Is Being Prepared for Montpelier Gathering.

A meeting of the Vermont library association will be held in the Kellogg-Hubbard library building in Montpelier on Thursday, May 18. At the last meeting of the association it was voted to make an effort to include in the membership of the association all persons in the state who are in any way connected with library work and with this end in view Edward M. Goddard, president of the association, has been sending out circular letters to persons affiliated with library work to interest them.

An interesting programme is being arranged for the meeting and addresses will be made before the association by a well known librarian from out of the state as well as by one or two other speakers not yet selected. Opportunity will be given for the discussion of various phases of library work and members of the board of library commissioners will be present to explain the work of the commission.

In order that the entertainment committee may make suitable arrangements for the entertainment of the association it is desired that those who can do so will make known promptly whether or not they expect to be present at the meeting. Plans will be made to entertain those who find it convenient to remain in the city over night.

You Must Sleep.

If you cannot, it is due to an irritated or congested state of the brain, which will soon develop into nervous prostration.

Nature demands sleep, and it is as important as food; it is a part of her building and sustaining process. This period of unconsciousness relaxes the mental and physical strain, and allows nature to restore exhausted vitality.

Dr. Miles' Nervine brings refreshing sleep, because it soothes the irritation and removes the congestion.

It is also a nerve builder; it nourishes and strengthens every nerve in your body, and creates energy in all the organs.

Nothing will give strength and vitality as surely and quickly as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"During the past winter I had two attacks of LaGrippe which left me very weak, and in bad condition. I was so nervous I could not sleep. My wife, after trying different remedies, went for a doctor. The doctor was out, and a neighbor recommended Dr. Miles' Nervine, and she brought home a bottle. I had not slept for some time, and had terrible pains in my head. After taking a few doses of Nervine the pain was not so severe, and I slept. I am now taking the second bottle, and am very much improved."

HENRY M. SMITH, Underhill, Vt.
Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails, he will refund your money.

The organization carry twenty people, a car load of special scenery for each production, and the highest salary repertoire company on tour. This play was written expressly for Miss Turner and introduces her famous pair of Shetland ponies. Her opening play Monday night, "Cory Corbiers," is a high priced production, and is played by no other repertoire company. ## PEACE AND VIOLENCE MIXED.

Second Arbitration Move in the Chicago Strike Fails—Disorder in Streets.

Chicago, April 14.—Notwithstanding a continuance of the strike of teamsters and garment-workers, Montgomery, Ward & Co. yesterday started out more wagons than on any previous day since the teamsters struck. The police guarded the wagons. One more effort to reach a settlement was in progress yesterday, representatives of the Chicago Employers' Association having arranged to meet a committee of labor leaders at the Great Northern Hotel. While the peace conference was in session scenes of disorder prevailed on the streets. The meeting resulted in no advancement toward peace. Montgomery, Ward & Co. took the stand that the places of the nineteen garment workers who went out on strike had been filled, and that the strikers could not be reinstated.

UNIONS MUST PAY.

Concern Which Was Blacklisted Gets Damages.

St. Catharines, Ont., April 14.—A jury has awarded damages of $1,500 against six labor unions of this city in a suit begun by the Gurney Foundry Company, of Toronto, on account of the unions having put the Gurney goods on the unfair list. The Gurney company asked for damages of $5,000 against each member of the six unions, $10,000 from the unions collectively and an injunction to restrain them from further boycotting the firm's goods. In 1902 the Gurney company decided to run an open shop and the unions began to wage warfare against the business of the company throughout the province. Judge Anglin decided the point of liability himself and the jury assessed damages.

HIS NOSE IN A VISE

Munyon's Paw-Paw and Inhaler Cured Him

A great sufferer of Catarrh sent me a letter stating that he felt as though his nose was in a vise; that he had been unable to breathe through his nose for nearly three years. That he had had two operations and had been treated by a number of specialists, but every time he caught a cold the air passages of his nose became so greatly inflamed that he was obliged to breathe through his mouth. That there was a constant dropping of mucus into his throat and stomach, which produced Dyspepsia, Insomnia and Melancholy. That it had affected his hearing so that he was almost deaf. That he had noticed my advertisement claiming that my Paw-Paw and Inhaler would positively cure Catarrh, and with but little faith he concluded to make one more effort to get well, and much to his astonishment he began to improve after the first day, and although he had been using this treatment less than two weeks, he is now able to breathe through his nose, the Catarrhal discharges having almost ceased, and his hearing has been quite restored. This case is similar to thousands of others. Catarrh is not only a vice on the nose and air passages but is a vice against morals and good judgment. It is a vice to be sick from any disease if you can be cured. It is a vice to have a foul breath if it can be sweetened. It is a vice to suffer with indigestion if you can be cured. Nothing breeds gloom or unhappiness so surely; nothing unites a man for business or social life so completely as this dread disease—Catarrh.

Some physicians claim that more than nine-tenths of Stomach troubles and Nervousness is due to some Catarrhal condition of the system. Specialists of the highest repute declare that Catarrh is a germ disease, and the only way to cure it is by purifying the blood and killing the germ by local applications. They are absolutely right. I am proving it every day with my combination treatment. My Paw-Paw positively purifies the blood and drives all Catarrhal poisons from the system. Paw-Paw makes one eat—it digests all they do eat. It puts life and vitality into the weak and debilitated, makes the old feel young.

MUNYON, Philadelphia, Pa.

MONEY REFUNDED.

To prove that I have a positive and complete cure for Catarrh, I am authorizing druggists to give away with a $1.00 bottle of Paw-Paw my $1.00 Inhaler and a package of Catarrh Tablets absolutely free with each bottle. More than this, to the person that is not perfectly satisfied with this treatment, if they will bring me back their outfit I will refund the money.

MUNYON, Philadelphia.

BURLINGTON SQUABBLE.

Charges of Crookedness Hurlled Across Table.

Burlington, April 14.—A fitting title for the special meeting of the board of aldermen, held Wednesday night, would be "A Royal Squabble." From almost the very opening of the meeting until near the close of it it was a squabble and during the time charges of crookedness were thrown across the board and temper was displayed to an unusual degree. In fact the controversy became so heated at one time that Mayor Burke begged President Taft to call the members to order. The meeting was called that night for the ostensible purpose of appointing a committee to investigate the city water supply, but that was merely a minor detail, the discussion revolving itself into a controversy over the payment of bills presented by F. Henry Parker, these bills being returned to the board with the mayor's veto. A special committee was finally appointed to go over the bills and their report induced the mayor to withdraw his veto and the bills were paid.

All the members of the board were present last night. The first business to come before the board was a resolution providing that a special committee be appointed to investigate and report back to the board as to the best and most feasible way of improving the condition of the city's present water supply. This committee is to consist of the water committee of the board of aldermen and Dr. J. B. Wheeler, Dr. F. E. Clark and City Engineer F. O. Sinclair.

HALF HOUR FOR LUNCH

[Copyright, 1904, by Temple Bailey.]
Jeanette's fingers flew over the keys of her typewriter, then there was a sharp click as she struck a final period and a sigh of relief as she drew the paper out with a whir.

"One, two, three—out goes she. And brews herself a cup of tea."

she sang as she went to a file case and took out from certain odd corners a quaint blue teapot, a caddy, a sugar bowl, two cups and two spoons.

The man at the desk on the other side of the room settled back in his chair and dropped the pencil.

"You ought to be presiding over a home teakettle," he said, "instead of one in an office."

"Sufficient unto the day," interjected Jeanette as she measured the tea.

"But you really should think about it," persisted Francis Darcy, chief clerk in the law office in which Jeanette Melton did the typewriting.

"Oh, I'll think about it," said Jeanette airily, "and some day when the proper millionaire flits across my horizon I'll say goodbye to these musty, dusty rooms and enter my proper sphere," and she lighted the alcohol lamp under her brass kettle and went to the window for the bottle of cream.

Darcy whirled around and looked at her keenly. "I didn't mean that," he said.

"Oh, didn't you?" asked Jeanette calmly. "In one breath you say one thing and contradict it in the next. Now, what do you really mean?"

She sat down to wait for the kettle to boil and fixed her teasing gray eyes on him.

"You know what I mean, Jeanette," he began. "I don't want you to leave here until you are ready to come to me as my wife—to my home."

"In other words, you want me to transfer my tea making from the office to a flat. Oh, it's much nicer this way. You might get tired of me if we were married, and think how dreadful that would be! Now if you get tired of me you can get a new typewriter, but you couldn't get a new wife."

"And, besides," he said bitterly, "I am poor, and you don't want to marry a poor man, Jeanette."

"No," she said, "but if I loved"—and then she stopped as the door opened and the junior member of the firm looked in. The junior partner was young, rather floridly handsome and very well pleased with himself.

"Oh, put that away," he said, as he saw the tea arrangements, "and come out for lunch with me."

But Jeanette shook her head. "Don't ask me," she pleaded; "just think what

I shall miss," and she laughed as she named them. "A chicken sandwich, a slice of homemade cake and tea—my own tea—home brewed," and she flashed a bright glance across at Francis, who sat tapping his foot gloomily.

But the eagerness of the junior partner was only increased by her refusal.

"You shall have a bird and salad and a soufflé," he said, "and wine, if you will."

Darcy clinched his hand, but the junior partner heeded him no more than the fly which crawled on the wall. He wanted Miss Melton to lunch with him. She was fair and sweet and pretty, by Jove, as pretty as any girl in his own set.

"Come," he pleaded. Jeanette glanced toward Darcy and met in his face only sternness. If he had but known that she wished to refuse; that she would rather drink a cup of tea with him than have all the fine lunches in Christendom. But he did not know, and she, missing the sympathy that she had looked for, said "yes" to the junior partner.

Darcy sat alone, therefore, and ate a part of his lunch. He did not drink his tea, for he could not touch the pretty cup that she offered him daily with so much grace. He stared at the blank wall and imagined Jeanette in the softly lighted dining room of the great hotel. He knew the junior partner would take her to a fashionable place. That was one thing in his favor—he was not ashamed to be seen with his typewriter. But it was the first time that Jeanette had gone.

"And it won't be the last," groaned poor Darcy, with his head on his desk.

"Yes, it will," said a soft voice behind him, and he whirled around to see Jeanette, all smiles and blushes, fresh as a rose.

"He asked me to marry him," she said without further remark.

Darcy's head dropped down on his desk.

Silence!

Then in the stillness came the "clickety-clickety-click" of Jeanette's typewriter. Darcy raised his head and picked up his pencil desperately. He might as well begin. Same old routine, same old work, same old struggle, and now Jeanette would be out of it, whirled into a gay life by the riches of the junior partner, and he would be alone—alone.

The typewriter was silent, and he heard the whir of paper being pulled out and then Miss Melton's step as she crossed the room. She laid a sheet of paper in front of him. On it was neatly typed, "But I refused him."

Darcy caught both of her hands in his.

"Oh, Jeanette, Jeanette!" he cried rapturously. "Why did you do it? Why did you refuse a rich man like that?"

"Because," said Jeanette demurely, "I'd rather make my tea."

"At the office or in our home, dear?"

"Both," said little Jeanette.
